JOB'S DAUGHTERS ENTERTAIN MEMBERS OF EASTERN STAR

A most enjoyable evening was spent by those attending the meeting of Crocker Chapter No. 382, Order of the Eastern Star, last Monday evening.

Through the courtesy of Crocker's splendid Worthy Matron, Florence Stockton, Bethel No. 26, Job's Daughters, known as the "Happy Bethel" of California, were invited to meet and initiate new members into its Bethel, on the regular meeting night of Crocker Chapter.

The new members to the "Happy Bethel" were Patricia Dugan, Loraine Bertha Maguire, Helen Wilson and Florence Stcokton, the latter being the daughter of the Worthy Matron. A very large attendance greeted the young ladies, and their floor work and the lessons taught were surely enjoyed by all present.

Owing to the absence of Mrs. Stella Jensen, the Guardian of this Bethel, Mrs. Mabel Bowen, wife of the Associate Gurdian and the Secretary of the Guardian Council, acted as Guardian of these lovely young ladies—"the fairest in the land"—and she is surely to be congratulated on bringing these young ladies to Crocker Chapter this night.

The personel of these Job's Daughters, known as the "Moderns," were last term officers, with May Bridler as the Queen, with the exception of the station of Senior Princess, filled by Josephine Jensen, Past Queen, and the fifth Messenger, filled by Sybel Riddell, who was the first Queen of Bethel No. 26. A duet added to the evening's entertainment, sung by Past Queen Donette Coakley and Past Queen Sybel Riddell.

After the splendid rendition of their ritual, Crocker Chapter invited them into the banquet room, where refreshments were served by one of Crocker's untiring committees, composed of Anna Neff, Anna Jones, Minnie Kahrau, Alice Nagle and Mrs. Elmers.

There is no doubt that everyone present were richly repaid for their attendance, and Job's Daughters (the "Happy Bethel") feels that if they added to that enjoyment, they in turn were most happy.

PRETTY WEDDING CEREMONY UNITES POPULAR COUPLE

Last Wednesday evening the Daly City Methodist Episcopal church was the scene of one of the most beautiful weddings that it has been the pleasure of the writer to witness in the community, when Miss Margaret Darragh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Felix Darragh, and the Rev. Elliott Fisher, pastor of the church, were united in the bonds of matrimony. The church was most wonderfully decorated with palms and roses, and many other lovely flowers, the gift of Mr. Mattrup Jensen, of Mount Olivet, and a gorgeous basket of red and white roses from the bride's girl friends with whom she has been associated in business.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Georgina Darragh, as maid of honor, her bridesmaids being the Misses Jean Darragh and Mary Hadden. She was given away by her father. The groom's brother, Mr. Buford Fisher, was best man, and the ushers were Allen Crockett and Bill Crockett. About 300 guests attended. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Congrove, of Berkeley, an old friend of the Fisher family, using the ring service. During the ceremony, "Because" was sung by Mrs. F. Chisholm, and "O Promise Me" by Mr. W. Lynch.

The bride looked charming in a gown of white satin and lace, with train. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. The bridesmaids wore pink taffeta, carrying pink roses. The maid of honor wore green taffeta, and carried yellow roses.

ROBERT FERGUSON FATALLY INJURED IN CHASE OF THIEVES

Tragedy entered the home of Principal James Ferguson of the Jefferson Union high school last week, when his only son, Robert Wesley Ferguson, aged 26, was called by death. And the tragedy was all the greater owing to the fact that the young man died as the result of an accident which took place while he was on duty as a member of the Los Angeles county motor patrol, and in pursuit of a law-breaker.

Late on Sunday afternoon the young officer was riding along Beverly boulevard, in Los Angeles, on duty, when he was hailed by a man whose car had just been stolen from the curb where it had been parked. The owner of the car saw two men enter it, drive off, and they were then about three blocks away. Young Ferguson, who was one of the most expert riders of the department, immediately gave chase, but at one of the intersections an automobile stopped in his path, blocking his way. He attempted to pass around the rear of the machine, but there was not sufficient room between it and the curb, and as a result his left knee struck the rear bumper of the car, shattering the officer's leg. He was taken to the hospital immediately and for two days appeared to be getting along all right, but on Tuesday he became unconscious and passed away the following day without regaining consciousness.

The cause of death was a mystery to the attending physicians, although the most expert specialists were called into the case. In the autopsy which followed the surgeons found that clots of blood from the wound on the leg had gotten into the veins and arteries and had been carried to the lungs and brain, stopping the circulation and causing death.

Principal Ferguson was on his way south to spend part of his vacation with his son when news of the seriousness of his condition reached him. He arrived at his son's bedside two hours before he died.

At the funeral services held in Los Angeles, the entire department attended in a body, and as a mark of honor and respect became an official escort as the remains were taken to the depot enroute to Mount Olivet cemetery here.

At the depot in San Francisco the funeral cortege was met by friends, and at the request of the Los Angeles county officials, with whom the deceased was a great favorite, was escorted to the cemetery by representatives of the local department.

Both in Los Angeles and at Mount Olivet services were conducted by the Order of Native Sons, of which the deceased was an esteemed member. Rev. Adams officiated in Los Angeles, and paid a glowing tribute to "the bravery and high character of the young officer who died at his post of duty protecting law abiding citizens from those who break the laws."

Rev. Carl Warner, district superintendent of the Methodist church, assisted by Rev. Elliott Fischer of the Daly City Methodist church, officiated at the services at Mount Olivet. Dr. Warner, who has been a close friend of Mr. Ferguson's father and mother since college days, paid tribute to the sterling qualities of the deceased and expressed the deepest sympathy of the entire community for the bereaved family.

In addition to his father, the deceased leaves a sister, Mrs. Carl Helgeson, of San Francisco, to mourn his death.

The bereaved family have the sympathy of their many friends in this community in the sudden passing of a beloved son, a young man with a splendid repuation and a promising future.

STATE SPENDS VAST SUM FOR HOMES AND FARMS FOR VETERANS

California has expended more than $22,500,000 in the purchase of approximately 5,000 homes and about 250 farms for veterans of the World war who joined the colors in this state, according to figures furnished State Adjutant James K. Fisk of the American Legion by George M. Stout, secretary of the state veterans' welfare board. The purchases have all been made with funds secured through the two veterans' farm and home loan acts. The entire amount expended is being repaid to the taxpayers, with interest, by the war veterans.

Stout makes the following interesting statement:

"Practically all of the demand has been for homes, indicating that the veterans are not going back to the soil in any great numbers. Of the farms purchased, more than half were in a few counties, namely, Fresno, Imperial, Madera, Riverside, San Joaquin, Stanislaus and Tulare. Each of these had more than ten farms purchased, Fresno leading with thirty-one and Imperial second with twenty-six. In many counties there have been no requests for farm purchase aid, and in most of them but one or two.

On the other hand the board is swamped with applications for home building aid, and has many thousands now on file. In the number of homes purchased, Los Angeles county leads with 1,633. Then in order are Alameda with 744; San Francisco with 490; Sacramento with 406. Those having more than one hundred homes are Fresno, San Diego, San Joaquin and Santa Clara. San Mateo county is credited with ninety-six.

The figures show the average cost of homes to be $4,687; the average cost of farms, $5,415. The total amount expended to May 1, 1928, not including escrows, $22,568,849.84, the amount expended for homes purchased in April, 1928, being $871,750, and for farms purchased in April, 1928, but $15,000.

The wedding of Miss Freda Christin, daughter of Mrs. C. Christin, of Templeton avenue, and Leon Winant took place last Saturday evening at St. Maximus church. The Rev. Father Lynch performed the ceremony in the presence of many relatives and friends of the young couple.

The altar was decorated with urns filled with flowers and the chancel was lighted with cathedral candles. Th bride's gown was of white lace. The long tulle veil was held in place by a wreath of orange blossoms and the bridal bouquet was of lilies of the valley from which fell tiny silver ribbon. The maid of honor was Miss Alice Winant, who wore a pretty gown of peach georgette and wore a rhinestone band in her hair and carried a bonquet in peach shades to match her gown. Mr. Tony Milano acted as best man.

The wedding reception was held at the home of her sister-in-law, Mrs. M. Christin, of 374 Templeton avenue. The decorations were in pink and white and tiny colored lights. About 150 of their relatives and friends attended the reception.

The young couple have gone to Yosemite valley on their honeymoon.

SAN MATEO COUNTY MAY HAVE SPECIAL AIR POLICE FORCE

San Mateo county may soon have a force of air police, if plans conered Monday by the county supervisors at Redwood City become a reality.

An ordinance prohibiting unlicensed planes and unlicensed pilots from flying in San Mateo county was urged by Frank Flynn, superintendent of Mills Field. Flynn declared that an ordinance similar to the department of commerce act covering aviation would protect the public and lessen the possibility of smuggling of liquor and narcotics by unlicensed aviators, with unlicensed planes. He suggested that, if the ordinance is adopted, an inspector be appointed to see that every plane that goes up meets the requirements. He pointed out that he has the right to inspect the planes at Mills field, but no place else in the county. Alameda county already has adopted a similar ordinance for the protection of the public and for the advancement of aviation, Flynn told the board.

The matter was referred to District Attorney Swart and will be brought up at the first meeting in July.

The petition was placed on file with the promise of the board that every consideration possible will be given the matter.

REV. MADSEN TO DELIVER SERMON AT M. E. CHURCH

The Rev. Paul Madsen, pastor of Bethany Methodist church of San Francisco, will be the preacher Sunday evening at the Daly City Methodist church. Rev. Madsen has, for the past two years, carried on a constructive bit of work at Bethany church, and we are indeed fortunate to have him with us.

Kindle with holy flame our sacrifice,
Until Thy glorious purpose to our sight
Give clearer vision to our lifted eyes.

We hear from lands in tumult far away
The springing tread of multitudes made free.
The nations stir as those who greet the day,
Around the world rings out the reveille.

Thou seest their toil, though by the world unseen,
Thou hear'st their cry for help, for daily food.
Challenge Thy people, Lord, to make more keen
The undefeated quest for brotherhood.

Up in the shadowed lands the murmur swells
Of broken hearts, of discontent, of strife,
Of faith perverted, quickened hope; it tells
The multitudes have felt the surge of life.

Hear Thou, O Lord, and teach Thy Church to hear!
To save the suff'ring peoples Thou hast died.
Can we who love Thee fail the cross to bear,
Since Thou for them and us wast crucified?

Lead on, O glorious Christ, thro' lands and years!
Our hearts have caught the sounds of victory.
Before our faith the wondrous day appears,
When all the world should love and worship Thee.

ELLIOTT L. FISHER, Pastor.

NUMBER OF DRIVERS MAY BE SENT TO JAIL

Persons whose licenses to operate motor vehicles have been revoked for any cause have been warned by the division of motor vehicles that stern measures will be used against them if they are caught driving before the legal revocation period expires.

The law provides a penalty in such cases of from five to ninety days in jail without alternative of a fine. Division officials announced that the maximum penalty would be sought in every case. The customary period of revocation is one year.

The different officers operating in the counties throughout the state will be furnished with a list of persons whose licenses have been revoked, with instructions to see that they do not drive until the legal revocation period expires.

A new list of forty-six revocations was announced by the division, bringing the total for the first five months of the year to 240. Of this number, 139 lost their right to drive because of operating a vehicle while intoxicated. Thirty-one of the forty-six revocations of the last month were on similar charges, it being the purpose of the division to continue its campaign until the highways are rid of drunken drivers.

NATIONAL CONFERENCE ON PARKS OF THE STATES

The attention of the nation will be centered on California's state park program, when the National Conference on State Parks holds its eighth annual session in San Francisco on June 26th to 29th, inclusive, and in Los Angeles on July 2nd and 3rd. The delegates are also desirous of visiting California's present parks, and obtaining first hand information on the proposed park program, including the campaign now being carried on to educate the people of this state to the necessity of preserving as state parks, before it is too late, those scenic and recreational areas for which California is world famous.

Every phase of state recreational development will be discussed at the several sessions of the conference—such subjects as legislation, administration, sanitation, park architecture, the recreational use of state forests, construction of roads and trails, and game protection.

The smooth top on the new Gas Range keeps cooking utensils clean

When you are in your kitchen you put on an apron, even if your kitchen is spotlessly clean.

Gas is a clean fuel. However, a smooth top is built into the new Gas Range to give you added cleanliness.

The smooth top protects the gas burners from food that would otherwise boil over onto the burners. For clean burners mean clean heat. The smooth top distributes heat evenly and one burner keeps several vessels boiling. It sends products of combustion up the flue.

See the new Gas Range with the smooth top built into the range for added cleanliness. Enjoy this range's fine cooking.

"REPEATER" CRIMINALS ARE MENACE TO PUBLIC

A recent news item states that Governor C. C. Young of California believes that the average convicted criminal should be pardoned only after he has worked for self-reformation, and has proven himself worthy of release. It is this policy, he said, that has caused him to issued fewer pardons and commutations of sentence than most of his predecessors in office. Systems designed to help and urge the criminal to reform and prepare himself for a place in society, such as the parole, pardon and commutation of sentence, are of great benefit and value when intelligently and conservatively used. But is seems unquestionable that they have often been abused, by mawkish sentiment that has issued pardons wholesale to criminals waiting for chances to commit further law violations, with the result that crime is encouraged.

Governor Young has taken the proper attitude. Most crime legislation puts the cart before the horse and defeats its own purpose. If we are to suppress crime we must act along lines of quick arrest, trial and conviction, and adequate punishment, without parole or pardon until it is shown that they are eminently deserved.

Further, the law should be so amended that a "repeater" criminal would automatically increase his own sentence with each crime repetition and conviction.

ACCUMULATED MONEY

In a recent issue of his syndicated column, "Today," Arthur Brisbane refutes George Bernard Shaw, the English writer, when he says that accumulated money is the root of all evil.

Brisbane replied that it is accumulated money that has harnessed Niagara Falls, built the Panama Canal, and has placed automobile production on a quantity basis that has given the American people 24,000,000 inexpensive motor cars.

Great accumulations of capital, like great accumulations of water going down hill, represents power. Eliminate accumulated capital and you would eliminate possibilities of higher civilization.

He says the people have brains eonugh to watch and control accumulated capital and take advantage of the benefits conferred by it, quoting these figures to prove that the country is prosperous: In May, corporations in which millions of employees are stockholders declared dividens of $347,900,405, and in June dividends will total $500,000,000.

The first of June, the total number of persons employed by all Detroit motor car factories was 354,073, the highest on record—real prosperity.

A scientists predicts many severe earthquakes for this summer. Candidates would be satisfied with a few landslides.

"COMMAND TO LOVE" COMES TO GEARY THEATRE JUNE 25

With the most outstanding list of players ever seen in one attraction in San Francisco, Mary Nash, Basil Rathbone and Violet Kemble Cooper in "The Command to Love" with Henry Stephenson, will begin a limited engagement at the Geary Theatre, San Francisco, Monday night, June 25. The entire New York cast and production is coming intact from an all-season run at the Longacre Theatre, New York City, and it is to return shortly after the coast engagement for a season's run in Chicago.

"The Command to Love" is from the German of Rudolph Lother and Fritz Gottwald, and prepared for the American stage by Herman Bernstein and Brian Marllow. It was staged by Lester Lonergan. The action takes place in the French embassy in Madrid, Spain, and in the rooms of the young and good looking French attache, who is torn between his love and fidelity for a beautiful woman and his duty to France. How he combines them both is said to be the chief cause of hilarity in the comedy.

The three stars, although they have not been seen in San Francisco for some time, are well known to lovers of the best in the theatre. Mary Nash was last seen in San Francisco in "Thy Name is Woman." Basil Rathbone was last seen here with Elsie Ferguson in "The Grand Duchess and the Waiter." Violet Kemble Cooper, one of the famous stage family which dates back to Mrs. Siddons, has not graced a local stage for an even longer time. Henry Stephenson, who is featured with the stellar trio, has for years been credited with being one of the most distinguished actors on the English and American stage. Other members of the well selected cast are all familiar to theatre-goers for their work in New York. The engagement of "The Command to Love" at the Geary is limited.

Tourists will travel thousands of miles this summer to see the same billboard scenery they have at home.

This is the season when father takes a few furitive glances at the clothing store windows and then gets the old Palm Beach pressed.

Miss Polly Turns Matchmaker

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

(Copyright.)

FEW residents of South Haven got a more genuine insight into the goings-on of the young generation than Miss Polly, the librarian. For example, who but Miss Polly knew that Candace Stone and Arthur Morton were spending priceless moments conversing in the stock room while Candace's unreasonable father was forbidding Arthur the house because the elder Morton had beaten him in a business deal.

And, but for Miss Polly, how would the affairs of Candace's Cousin Rosemary have turned out?

Rosemary Winters was a girl so pretty that you wanted to turn for another look at her and she was in great danger of being spoiled by too much masculine attention too early in life.

Miss Polly had led Rosemary from nursery classics for little tots to Adam Bede and had come to feel for her a certain vicarious motherliness. Therefore it was with a distinct shock that she met Rosemary one afternoon with a book under her arm from the circulating library in the drug store. A book with a particularly lurid reputation.

Two days later, from her desk beside the window, Miss Polly saw Rosemary sauntering by with a young stranger older by a dozen years than the girl at his side.

And because of that vicarious motherhood which Miss Polly had been secretly hugging to herself where Rosemary was concerned, she began to search for some means by which the girl's interest might be turned from this unprepossessing newcomer to some boy of her own age. Like—well, why not? Like clean, healthy, freckle-faced Jimmy Armstrong with whom Rosemary had played marbles.

But Miss Polly was subtle about it. For a time it was merely, "Why, no, Rosemary, I don't believe you can have that particular book. I'm saving it for Jimmy."

Or, "Sorry Jim, but if I let you take that magazine Rosemary Winters is sure to come in for it this very afternoon."

But after a month of dragging in each other's names, Miss Polly decided that more drastic action was necessary. Rosemary was still frequently to be seen in the company of the objectionable stranger.

On one such occasion, fortune favored Miss Polly by sending Jim into the library just after the pair had passed.

"Who is that young man with my lovely Rosemary, Jim? Don't like his looks, somehow."

Jim's eyes widened. "Why, I just passed them. But is that fellow really chasing Rosemary? He's no good, Miss Polly."

Miss Polly saw that he continued to frown as he ran through several books abstractedly, and so pleased was she with the effect on Jim of Rosemary's attraction for somebody else that she decided to draw on her imagination and try something similar on Rosemary.

"Who," she inquired casually on her next encounter with the girl, "is that flirty little thing trying to make up to nice Jimmy Armstrong?"

Rosemary looked blank. "I can't imagine," she said truthfully. "Jim is a regular old stick-in-the-mud where girls are concerned. Why he wouldn't know there was a girl around if she fell in his lap!"

Miss Polly shrugged her thin shoulders. "I guess maybe that was in the past, Rosemary," she said.

Then she noticed that in the book that Rosemary was returning was a letter and that Rosemary, her mind intent on something else, had evidently overlooked it.

Miss Polly checked off the book on her slip and then glanced at the superscription on the letter:

"Mr. Harold Potter
96 Webster Street
Brownsville."

A thick, bulky letter. Was Rosemary playing with fire?

She did not return the letter but thought about it all the afternoon. And that evening she telephoned to Jimmy Armstrong.

"I found a letter of Rosemary's in a book she was returning. It was stamped, but as there is a chance she may have changed her mind about sending it, I wonder if you would be willing to drop around and take it over to her? If she has changed her mind, you will see why I don't want to drop it in the box when I tell you that I think it is to the person we were speaking of the other day!"

Encouraged by Jimmy's eager response, Miss Polly returned to her chair. "Well," she sighed, "I've done all a mortal can do. I've sent a nice young man to a pretty girl's house. I've given them each the idea that the other needs saving from somebody."

But not until some weeks later, when Rosemary and Jim came into the library together on a telltale quest, did Miss Polly learn just how successful she had been.

"I'd like something on raising chickens," said Jim boldly.

Rosemary was more bashful. "And I want a book, Miss Polly," she said hesitatingly, her cheeks mantled with a lovely flush, "on—well, on the etiquette of small weddings in the home!"

Rustled Cattle With Truck, Police Charge

Winnipeg.—Old-timers of the city police force sighed for the romantic past recently as they considered the case of William Berry of Bird's Hill.

William is charged with cattle stealing and when the old-timers heard of it they hied back to the days when cattle stealing was a pastime in the West. There is a big difference, however, between methods which William is alleged to have used in rustling cattle and those of the romantic past.

Instead of a horse he used an auto truck, police say. He is said to have loaded two calves and a yearling cow on his truck and made away with them.

OL' KING BRADY COMES TO LIFE

Blamed for the Loss of $240 by Traveler.

Kansas City, Mo.—Old King Brady, the story-book detective, is blamed by Glenn R. Welzel of West Union, W. Va., for the loss of $240 here recently.

According to his story to police, Welzel was killing time in the Union station between trains for Denver when he met a pleasant young stranger who recalled several amusing experiences in West Union—after learning it was the home of his companion.

During a further exchange of confidences, the stranger said he also was bound for Denver and suggested seeing the sights before train time.

At Fifteenth street and Grand avenue they were joined by another stranger, who felt the urge to gamble and suggested matching dollars. In a short time Welzel had won $9 from his companions and was well pleased with the game.

At this point his pleasant contemplation of his winnings was interrupted by the appearance of another stranger who informed him that he was King Brady, now working on the Kansas City detective department.

"While I take these crooks to the jailhouse, you let me keep your money," the pseudo-detective told Welzel.

Feeling grateful for his narrow escape, Welzel intrusted $240 to King Brady and promised to remain on the spot until his return.

After several hours' patient vigil, Welzel suddenly recalled that King Brady always wore a black slouch hat while the custodian of his funds was wearing a brown derby.

He notified police, who verified his suspicion that the fake detective was merely a member of the gang.

Author's Typewriter Opens Door of Jail Cell

Quebec.—Opening the door of his cell and the gates of the prison with keys of his typewriter, Robert Horton, a young writer who has several novels to his credit and who had been detained in the local jail on a charge of having jumped his hotel bill, walked to freedom recently after serving ten days.

When Horton, evidently highly rated by at least one of the leading magazines in the United States, appeared before Judge P. A. Choquette in the Court of Sessions of the Peace to answer to the accusation of having lived in the hostelry without paying his way, he produced a letter he was sending to an American publication asking that $500 be sent him at once to settle his account. He was remanded to jail for a day to find out what reply he would get. When he again appeared before the judge he explained, and his statement was supported by documentary evidence in the shape of a letter from the publisher, that the money would be forthcoming as soon as he could send the magazine an article on a certain subject. He asked the court to allow him the use of a typewriter in his cell. The request was granted.

For eight days the unusual click of the writing machine was heard in his cell. He composed the required article, which was mailed to the American publication. Two days later he received a registered letter containing a certified check for $500. He paid the hotel here and Judge Choquette released him.

Petticoats Are Useful; They Save Girl's Life

Prague.—No longer does the pretuxedo "boiled" shirt rank as the stiffest linen available to deflect anything from soup to bullets. Starch saved a peasant girl's life at a Czechoslovakian village near Bratislava (the prewar Pressburg) when a jealous swain shot at her with a revolver and, thinking he had killed her, made his escape. When neighbors came to her assistance, however, she quickly recovered.

In Czechoslovakia the traditional peasant costume is still generally worn, and as the girl was armored with ten heavily starched petticoats, the bullet caused only slight injury.

Phonograph Records Faces

J. L. Baird, inventor of television, has found a method of making phonograph records of faces, the Associated Press reports.

When the image of a person or object is transmitted by Mr. Baird's method of television certain sounds can be heard in a wireless receiver. Thus, according to the inventor, "some faces sound like a gargle, others like a shout."

Modern Youth Lives "In Deeds, Not Hours"

"I believe that the incoming generation is going to effect some marvelous changes in this frenzied world of ours." The speaker was Charles M Schwab.

"I base this prediction on the astonishing initiative and self-reliance of the younger set," he continued. "These qualities are often misapplied and are the butt of unlimited 'wise cracks.

"I asked a friend of mine one day how his car was running. His reply was: 'You'll have to ask my son, as I haven't seen the car for a week. But don't call him up until noon, as he never rises before then.'

"Now, this father was rather bitter, but, on the other hand, I predict that his boy will be a success."

Prestige

Merle Waterman, athletic instructor of the Hollywood "Y," in a talk to the boys, cautioned them against the unwise practice of so many people of "putting on the dog." "It reminds me of the story:

"'Ye gods!' exclaimed Smith, who had come up just in time to see South exchanging $30 for an antiquated car. 'What in heaven's name are you buying that old wreck for?'

"'Well,' explained South, 'my wife is shamed every time she has to admit we haven't a car. I can't afford to have one, but buying this thing that won't run and won't need any upkeep in the garage, she'll be able to say we have a car and there'll be no need to go into further details.'"—Los Angeles Times.

Document of Old Date

John W. A. Green, register of deeds of Exeter, N. H., has received a deed dated April 11, 1760, which is the oldest document to be recorded during his term as register. The deed conveys 30 acres of land in Hampton from Peter Johnson to Josiah Moulton for the sum of £2,755. It has the legal seal and reads in the thirty-third year of the reign of George II, king. The document was found in tracing a title and it was discovered that it had never been recorded.

RECOGNIZE THE WEST

Two men who started as orphans at the bottom of life's ladder, one the child of an Iowa blacksmith and the other a little Indian jockey on the plains of Kansas, were the choice of the delegates to the Republican national convention at Kansas City for President and Vice-President of the United States. These two typical Western men were each chosen on the first ballot as the candidates of the Republican party.

All Californians, regardless of political affiliation, will no doubt rejoice that a resident of California has been honored by a great political party as its standard bearer. The expected opposition to Secretary Hoover did not materialize, and he was elected on the first ballot by a most flattering majority. Senator Curtis also came out ahead in the race in a most flattering manner.

In the selection of Hoover and Curtis as the Republican candidates, the West will for the first time in history have truly Western representatives in the two highest offices in the gift of the people, should they be elected. Hence the residents of this great empire west of the Mississippi river have just cause to feel a little chesty these days, and probably do.

The delegates to the national convention at Kansas City ratified the choice of the rank and file of the Republican party, and the Republicans of the nation are looking forward eagerly to the day of election in the firm belief in the election of Herbert Hoover and Charles Curtis.

CLEARING THE AIR

Radio fans will be pleased to know that immediate steps will be taken to reduce the number of inferior broadcasting stations in accordance with the new radio law.

In a general order the Federal Radio Commission has rescinded the licenses of 162 stations which must get off the air by August 1. In the meantime these stations will be given an opportunity to show cause why they should not be abolished.

While it will be impossible to carry out the plan of reducing the number of stations without dissatisfaction and possibly injustice, the present situation is intolerable and must be relieved in the interest of the thousands who have invested in radio sets and are entitled to protection from the jumble of sounds which now fill the air.

The reduction of stations should be followed by the elimination of many of the cheap musical numbers and tiresome lectures which clutter up the ether and interfere with the reception of worth while programs.

A HAPPY SCHOOL

Darby M. Callaway, affectionately known as "Boss," taught school in Selma, Alabama, forty-three years, from 1868 to 1911, since which time he has been county superintendent. He is now 81 years old and at a recent reunion of his former pupils he was presented with a handsome loving cup.

He is known far and wide because his school gained a reputation for being a happy school, where mutual affection existed between teacher and pupils and where harsh measures were never employed in governing the children under his care. In accepting the cup, Mr. Callaway made a speech in which he said in part:

"I tried to make my students happy. While in school I hated every teacher I ever had and I hate all of them still, for none of them was ever kind to me or to anybody else. And I determined that if I ever grew to manhood I would have a school where everybody in it would be happy. I knew that if I won the love of my pupils they would be happy and in all probability they would be interested in their studies. It was impossible for me to think of keeping my boys and girls miserable for four years, during a period which should be for them the brightest and most joyous part of their lives."

Mr. Callaway's pupils did take an interest in their studies and many of them have won high distinction in various walks of life. Quite possibly his philosophy is right, and perhaps others might with equal success adopt his attitude, so tersely expressed in his own words: "I tried to make my students happy."

"ANDY GUMP" SUES

One of the strangest lawsuits on record is that of David A. Hoag, of Canandaigua, N. Y., against two Syracuse newspapers for $1,000,000 each, on a charge of libel. Hoag claims that the popular comic strip, "Andy Gump," is a caricature of himself and has caused him much distress of mind and brought him into disgrace, through its publication in the newspapers named. He asserts that in 1915 he was forced to have a part of his lower jaw removed on account of a cancerous growth, and that Sidney Smith took advantage of the ridiculous appearance of his face to create the character of "Andy Gump," thus exposing the said David A. Hoag "to hatred, contempt, ridicule and obloquy, and has caused and will continue to cause him to be shunned and avoided, and has caused him great distress of mind and has disgraced and dishonored him." While the comic strip has been published all over the country, it is assumed that the suit is brought against the Syracuse newspapers because they are published near the plaintiff's home and therefore call attention locally to his peculiar appearance.

The trial of the cases will be observed with absorbing interest by publishers and others on account of the unique character of the complaint.

SEEING THE SIGHTS

It is difficult to imagine the sensations experienced by persons from isolated sections of the world, particularly island dwellers, when first brought into contact with the facilities of modern life.

A recent dispatch tells of the wonder with which Rachel Gillies, a 17-year-old girl from the Island of St. Kilda, off the English coast, first saw a horse, an automobile, a railroad train and a moving picture on her first visit to the mainland.

Thousands of people live and die without seeing any of these things, although they live within a comparatively short distance of them all.

But it is not only those who live in sparsely settled localities who are unfamiliar with objects which are commonplace to the great majority. Not long ago a large and curious crowd gathered in a certain section of New York City to see a strange animal which had often been heard of but never witnessed by those gathered to gaze upon the beast. It was a cow.

SCHOOL BANDS GROW

Although it was once thought that the advent of mechanical musical instruments and the radio would tend to discourage the study of music, it appears that the opposite has been the case.

The revived interest in music study is nowhere more marked than in the schools of the country, where the growth of bands and orchestras in recent years has been unprecedented.

Only a few days ago about 3,000 musicians of New England participated in band and orchestra contests held in Boston, the program concluding with a concert by an orchestra composed of 216 picked players, using every kind of instrument employed in the finest symphony orchestras. Similar demonstrations have been witnessed in other parts of the country and renewed interest in school bands and orchestras appears to be nation-wide.

These organizations add much to school and community life and their further development should receive every encouragement.

MANIAC IN A PLANE

Ordinary hazards of flying are sufficient to keep a pilot fairly occupied, but Harry Anderson, of Roseville, Michigan, encountered a most unusual one a few days ago which might well have turned his brain to correspond with that of his passenger.

In his ordinary routine of taking persons on airplane flights for hire, he was engaged by one Clarence Frechett, of Detroit, to make a trip to Pontiac. As they neared their destination, Frechett seized a hammer and began striking Anderson over the head, knocking the pilot unconscious. After the plane had dived about 1,800 feet, Anderson recovered consciousness in time to make a very rough landing in which both were injured, but not seriusly.

Appropriately, the landing happened to be in the grounds of the Pontiac insane asylum, which was a very suitable destination for Frechett, who was raving crazy.

The moral of this seems to be that when piloting a plane for a stranger it would be a wise precaution to see that he is securely shackled before taking off. Or the pilot should wear heavy armor.

It appears that the Mexican constitution requires the president to take oath that he will execute the laws and all rival candidates.

THE DAY OF DAYS

By J. ANINO

The other day I had the shock of my life. I nearly fainted. Just imagine: I read on a fancy colored card at one of our fashionable "Men's Shops" that June 17th had been declared Father's Day. Can you believe it? We have had Mother's day, boys' and girls' day, even dog's days; but so far, Father had none. He was left where he belongs; in obscurity. And simply because Father is a humble, patient, abused "being." He is classed by wife and children as a sort of domestic animal, good-for-nothing, except for work. His will is not his own, not even when he makes what sarcastically is called "his last will." His mission on earth is to produce, and try to please the family and their friends. In other words, he is the veritable Shock Absorber.

No one even dared to praise father, and the Muses never inspired a poet to sing the glories of fatherhood.

How will they celebrate Father's Day? God knows! Perhaps by the children wearing a flower in their buttonholes or corsages, just to tell the world that they have or had a father, the goat of the family. Or else our sons and daughters may send us a present, a token of their love. Fathers, get ready! Cheap handkerchiefs, near-silk neckties, cotton socks or slippers may be yours. So, the monring of June 17th will have the sad awakening of every Christmas morn.

Marking the first definite fight of the campaign in California Congressional districts, Mrs. Cecelia C. Casserly of San Mateo county has filed papers as a candidate in the Eighth district against Congressman Arthur M. Free of San Jose.

Mrs. Laid J. Stabler, wife of a University of Southern California professor, was killed and six others were seriously injured in an automobile collision on the highway near Bakersfield.

SIDELIGHTS

E. Peter Jones, an Englishman who recently arrived in New York, is making a strong bid for recognition as a public benefacor through his designing of an automobie which virtually eliminates the back-seat driver. This laudable object is attained, Jones claims, by the simple expedient of building the back seat so that it faces to the rear.

Fainting is contagious in the Duncan family of Newton, Mass., it seems. One day recently the father swooned and fell to the floor. Agitated by the sight, his wife did likewise; then the eldest son, seeing the plight of his parents, also passed out; while the younger son when he appeared on the scene was able to call a doctor before keeling over himself. All four were strewn about the floor unconscious when the physician arrived, but were restored quickly and went their way.

Although he climbed a 50-foot tower and "skinned the cat" on his 95th birhday, Dr. Edwin Osbaldeston of Ashbury Park, N. J., is mindful of the uncertainty of human life and is shopping around for a cheap funeral. He has finally succeeded in getting a bid of $150 from one undertaker, but thinks he will yet be able to get himself put away for $100.

Cupid is employing modern means for carrying on his congenial occupation these days. H. B. du Pont of Wilmington, Del., will visit his sweetheart in Texas by airplane each week-end, while Paul Oscanyan, a radio operator in Greenland, has become engaged "sight unseen" to Miss Helen Sunder, Norway's only woman manager of radio station, their courtship having been pursued through the ether.

Students at Yale will not be permitted to clutter up the campus with aircraft or indulge in aerial stunts during recess if a new faculty regulation is enforced. The new rule reads: "No undergraduate is allowed to operate any form of aircraft without permission of the dean of the school in which he is enrolled."

A. G. Bush, a veteran locomotive engineer, lost his false teeth out of his cab window near Lexington, Ky., stopped the train and backed up to search for them. They were finally found by someone searching along the track, who returned them with the admonition: "Keep your face shut."

Karl W. Lundberg found the right girl on the wrong boat when he tried to sail from Honolulu for San Francisco, only to find that he had by mistake boarded a ship bound for Alaska. However, all ended well. The girl, then Miss Marie Benzet, whom he met and wooed while on his unpremeditated Alaskan voyage, is now Mrs. Lundberg.

Delores Del Rio, movie star, recently sent her voice over a telephone wire 3,500 miles and a phonograph record of the song was made at the other end. This is the first time a phonograph record has ever been made at such a distance.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

Building work at State institutions completed since July 1, 1927, involved expenditure of $1,533,025.19, Bert B. Meek, state director of public works, reported a few days ago to Governor C. C. Young. On these completed projects, Meek said, the Division of Agriculture saved $43,714.82 over the regular budget allotments.

Wild fires have taken a toll of more than a million dollars' worth of property in California and have caused at least two deaths, this early in the season. Yolo, Colusa, Butte, Tuolumne, and Tulare counties have suffered the heaviest up to this time.

The cornerstone of the new $100,000 Machinery Building, now under construction at the State Fair Grounds, will be laid by Governor C. C. Young on June 2, it has been announced. The state board of agriculture, the Traction and Implement Association, the California Irrigation Equipment Association, the Dairy Machinery Distributors and the Read Machinery Dealers will participate in the event.

With the election of Jack McDonald of San Francisco as district governor of the Lions' Clubs to succeed W. B. Wells of Pasadena, members of the organization closed their annual session at San Jose last week. Charles Adams of Berkeley was elected district secretary and Long Beach was chosen as next year's convention city.

The ruling of Attorney General U. S. Webb that state employes attending National Guard summer camps are entitled to their regular pay while absent will not result in a refund to those who attended camp last year, according to the announcement of Alexander Heron, director of the state department of finance.

Aroused by recently heavy losses from fires in grain and range lands, throughout the state, Frank G. Snook, chief of the state division of motor vehicles, last week launched a state traffic officer drive on all persons caught throwing burning material from automobiles. Snook's order calls for arrest of all motorists violating the fire law and for rigid enforcement of the statute prohibiting the throwing of burning cigarets, matches or tobacco from moving vehicles.

Sixty-one California cities now have standard model traffic regulations. These have adopted the uniform traffic ordinance sponsored by the Southern California State Automobile Association and the Automobile Club of Southern California to eliminate divergent regulations. Cities which have recently adopted the uniform code are Santa Paula, Colusa, Burbank, Fresno, Monrovia, Vallejo and Calipatria.

California is on the verge of very important improvements in court procedure—a tightening up in the administration of criminal justice and an elimination of red tape. Gov. C. C. Young makes this statement and he professes to see betterment of existing conditions in the immediate offing. The coming legislature, for instance, is more than likely to produce remedial measures of consequences, he thinks. "The object of court procedure," declared the executive, "should be the obtaining of substantial justice, not simply forensic contests between two smart attorneys to see who is the sharpest."

California, greatest of vacation lands, will have more than 6,000,000 motorists visiting its national parks and playgrounds during the summer months this year. This is more than twice as many as visit national parks in any other state. As soon as schools are closed for the summer and children can get away from lessons, the great migration begins in earnest. Thousands of motorists, unable to leave for extended periods, will drive to beaches and close-by parks and playgrounds. This change from the usual order results in added responsibility of the automobile driver, in avoiding accidents, particluarly involving school children.

Dr. Thomas F. Joyce of New York, recently retired from the New York City Department of Health, where he had charge of care and treatment of narcotic drug addicts, last week was announced as medical superintendent of California's new state narcotic hospital. Earl E. Jensen, state director of institutions, was in Los Angeles to confer with Dr. Joyce on personnel of the new hospital, which will be opened at Pacific Lodge, near Pomona, July 1. Leroy R. Bruce, secretary of the state department of institutions, stated that "New York authorities characterize the new superintendent as the best man in the country in handling the problems of narcotic addicts." The state narcotic hospital, ordered by the last Legislature, will be the first of its kind in California.

Material assistance will be given state governments in meeting the unemployment situation if Congress passes the Wagner bill establishing a national employment system, according to Will J. French, state director of industrial relations. The legislation, introduced by U. S. Senator Robert F. Wagner of New York, would provide $4,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1929, and for each subsequent year up to 1932. The states, French says, would be allotted about 75 per cent of this money on a population basis.

CELEBRATION OF BASEBALL ON AIR

Description of Parade and Speeches by Radio.

The climax of this year's annual celebration of Baseball day in Hartford, Conn., when seven thousand boys paraded through city streets to hear addresses by Judge Landis and both major league presidents, was recently broadcast by stations associated with the NBC Red network.

The parade of seven thousand boys all in baseball uniform and marching to the music of a dozen bands, got under way shortly after 8:00 o'clock, a. m.. The NBC network was linked with station WTIC in Hartford from 9:00 to 11:00 a. m. for a description of the parade by Graham McNamee and Phillips Carlin and to broadcast the speeches by the baseball monarchs.

The boys marched direct to the Capitol theater in Hartford, where the first four thousand were accomodated, and the overflow trooped to the Palace theater nearby, connected with the other by loudspeakers.

Speakers addressing the audience of young and old, were Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, baseball commissioner; John A. Heydler, president of the National league; E. S. Barnard, president of the American league; M. H. Sexton and John H. Farrell, president and secretary of the Association of Minor Leagues.

American Golfers Have Hard Luck in England

Out of the scores of Americans, men and women, who have played in the British amateur golf tournaments only two, the Australian-born Walter J. Travis and Jesse Sweetser, have triumphed, writes Ralph Cannon in the Chicago Journal.

England has had little better luck over here, although Harold Hilton won the men's amateur title in 1911, while Miss Dorothy Campbell, now Mrs. Hurd, took the women's laurels in 1900 and 1910, and Mrs. Temple Dobell, one of Miss Collett's victims in the present British tourney, was champion of America in 1913, when she was Miss Gladys Ravenscroft.

Two of Britain's greatest stars met defeat on American links in especially notable matches. Hilton, returning in 1912 in quest of his second straight men's title, was knocked out in the very first round by Charles G. Waldo, Jr., who never entered the ranks of champions.

Nine years later Miss Cecil Leitch, at that time queen of the links in Britain, tried for the American women's honors and after winning her first match was defeated in the second round by Mrs. F. C. Letts, Jr., 1 up. In that same tournament, in 1921, Miss Collett was eliminated by Miss Edith Leitch, sister of the British champion, but Edith Leitch fell later before Elaine Rosenthal, a sister of Mrs. Letts.

Baseball Players Offer Prizes on Legion Series

Several major league baseball stars will donate trophies to the leading players of the American Legion Junior baseball league, it was announced by officials of the Legion.

The following prizes are offered:

Ty Cobb—Trophy to the leading hitter.

Play started in the nationwide tournament late in May and will culminate in a junior world series for the boys' championship of the United States. Boys of seventeen years of age and under are eligible to compete.

Great Girl Athlete

STORY FROM THE START

Anthony Trent, once master criminal, now reformed, returns to New York after four years' absence. He learns his friend, Capt. Frank Sutton, is in Sing Sing. Trent is surprised to find his New York apartment occupied by a stranger, Campbell Sutton, who represents himself as the brother of Frank Sutton. Trent is asked by Campbell to force a confession from Payson Grant, whom he accuses of having crookedly obtained all of Frank Sutton's property and then married the latter's wife. Trent starts on a campaign to accomplish the downfall of Grant. He learns that Captain Sutton has escaped from Sing Sing and later, to his surprise, finds that Campbell is really Frank Sutton. Trent takes his place in society as the opening gun in his campaign against Grant.

"I see," he began, "that Bay Leaf won the third race today. I wish I hadn't taken that bet, but I thought two hundred, at ten to one, was safe enough. He counted out the crisp white notes of the Bank of England and passed them over the table. Under it he pressed Weld's foot with his own. Weld was sober enough now to know he must accept and question later. He paid his debts and followed Trent from the cardroom.

"I don't know how to thank you," he began.

"Don't," said Trent, smiling. "I had to come to your rescue when I saw that bunch."

Long ago Trent had been repaid in the form of a check signed by Swithin's wealthy uncle, Curtis Weld. The thing had been done spontaneously without any thought of future advantages. But as Trent sat in Van Boden's window and watched the throngs in America's greatest thoroughfare, he decided that he might now be able to use Swithin Weld's social prestige in a legitimate manner.

From the Travelers' club Trent learned that Weld was in town. And if he were in town it was to the Travelers' he would go. Trent walked up and down the Avenue for an hour ere he saw Weld, and then he allowed Weld to make the first overture.

"I thought you were in England," Weld said cordially.

"I've had to come over to look after some property," Trent said, speaking the truth. "I've borrowed Stratford Van Boden's flat for a month or so."

"I was just going to lunch," Weld said. "If you've nothing better to do, why not come with me?"

Within an hour Trent had found Weld's use to him. He learned that Mortimer Bentley, one of Weld's innumerable cousins, was selling some of his polo ponies because his bride did not wish him to run the risks of the game.

"Mortimer's team is playing some men from Deal Beach, or somewhere down there, this afternoon. If you'd like to see a game why not run down with me?"

Two hours later Anthony Trent was sitting beside one of the most fashionable of women, Joan Bentley, who called all the great families her relatives. The manner of his introduction would have amazed Frank Sutton. Joan asked Swithin Weld who the new man was.

"A good pal of mine," Swithin said heartily. "He has property over here, and is looking after it for a month or so. Stratford Van Boden lent him his flat. I've met him in England at the best places."

"Joan looked at Trent, who was talking to a group a few yards distant.

"Does he play?"

"Not a bad game," Weld told her. "Wish I played as well."

"He might buy some of Mortimer's ponies," said Joan reflectively. "Bring him here and introduce him. I'll do the selling, as you look horrified."

Trent liked Mrs. Bentley. She was not a pretty woman, but her face was interesting with its big gray eyes, set rather wide apart. And he recognized that she was particularly chic; she was far more envied than prettier women of her set. Trent found himself accepted instantly as a friend of Van Boden and Swithin Weld. Joan Bentley assumed that as he had passed their rigid scrutiny she had no occasion to doubt his place in the circles she jealously guarded.

It was not a regular club game. Bentley's team was playing a four from lower down the coast. Mortimer Bentley's wife had an idea that the invaders were impossible people, and did not meet them.

Of the visitors none looked so enviously at her as Natica Grant. She interested every one of the men in the group about Mrs. Bentley with those attributes peculiar to the highest society. Swithin Weld she knew by sight. But the personality of a tall, dark and rather bored type of man attracted her most. He must be, she concluded from Joan Bentley's interest in him, of that rare and happy group she had sworn to attain by devious routes.

"Why don't you play over here?" Mrs. Bentley was asking.

"I belong to no club and have no ponies," he said.

"Both poor reasons. Mortimer'll be delighted to put you up here, and as he's selling off the ponies not up to his weight you could get them quite reasonably."

"I hadn't thought of playing," Trent said. "As a matter of fact, I'm very little good at it. I have only a two-goal handicap," he confessed.

"With the exception of Mortimer, none of the others have been considered by the Polo association. It isn't a good reason. Most of the best men after playing in California all the winter, went off to England for the summer season. A two-handicap man can get all the play he wants."

Bentley's Team Was Playing a Four From Lower Down the Coast

Natica Grant heard Anthony Trent accept a dinner engagement at the Bentleys'. This confirmed her in the opinion that he was a distinguished person. She felt that the name Trent should have been familiar to her.

For his part, Trent knew that the pretty, fluffy person, exquisitely dressed, was Sutton's former wife. She would not have been flattered had she known why he looked so hard at her. He saw that she was one of those blond women who, under their exterior of feminine fascinations, can be cold and calculating. He was certain she was no less ruthless than her husband. Perhaps even she was more unrelenting. He was glad that from the first he did not like her. He could enter upon his task with no handicap. Trent admitted that Payson Grant was a handsome man of his type. But he had no pity in his heart for him. He looked upon those two as destined to submit to his discipline. They had broken the laws no less than he in other days had done. No matter what offenses were laid to the door of the unknown criminal whom no police bureau could identify as Anthony Trent, he had never betrayed those who trusted him, or returned evil for good.

"I hope you don't think I took you down to Red Bank for Mortimer to sell his ponies to."

"Not a bit," Trent answered cordially, "but I'm very glad you did take me down, all the same, and I've bought some good ponies at a very reasonable price."

Trent chuckled when he reached Van Boden's rooms. He had used Swithin Weld exactly as he had planned.

"In a week's time," he said to Sutton, "I shall be staying in the Guggensohn home. Then the fun begins."

Sutton was thinking of his companion's amazing social success of the afternoon.

"But can you play polo?" he asked. There was doubt in his voice. He did not yet see how Trent would have had the opportunity.

"Yes," said the other. "I'll tell you how I learned. To begin with, I've ridden since I was a child. I kept a saddle horse at Durlands for five years. I also played a little polo in the riding school, enough to give me an idea of the game and its rules. But in England—staying with the family I spoke of—I played almost every day. I'm naturally quick at sports, and the game's fascinating."

"You amaze me more and more," Sutton said quietly. "You seem to do everything well. I quite understand how it was you were never caught. But all this must be costing you a great deal of money." He thought of the Van Boden flat, the Mortimer Bentley polo ponies and the attendant expenses of the game.

"Don't bother about that," Trent returned. "I've more money, legitimately earned, than I can spend. I've had wonderful luck with real estate. I've got to spend money for this scheme, but I'm going to have the value for it." Trent chuckled. "It was funny to see Joan Bentley assuming I was one of her exclusive crowd and looking coldly at the elite of Deal Beach. Never seem anxious to get what you want and it will come to you."

"You seem wonderfully cheerful," Sutton remarked. He, in the same circumstances, would have been under a nervous strain. While it was more than probable Trent's wit would get him into the Grant home as an honored guest, that was only the beginning.

CHAPTER V

Anthony Trent Is Threatened.

Payson Grant was waiting one morning by the first tee for Buckbee the banker. He abandoned his listless attitude when he beheld Buckbee coming toward him with no less a personage than the Anthony Trent he had seen among the socially unreachable at the Rumson road polo field.

It was a heaven-sent opportunity for an introduction. Buckbee effected this as unaware as Grant himself that Trent had planned the whole thing. Grant made himself so affable, and on the spur of the moment planned a week of polo, that the friend of Swithin Weld and the intimate of Mrs. Mortimer Bentley was persuaded to participate.

Had Sutton laid a wager with Trent that he would not be staying in the Italian palace that copper had built for Guggensohn, within the week, he would have lost. It was a week to a day from the time that Trent had prophesied, that his roadster rolled up to the Grant entrance and his chauffeur, John Hubbard, drove it to the garage and established himself in Regan's good graces.

Trent was greeted with effusion by Natica Grant. She lamented the fact that he probably would not know one of the dozen house guests. They were business friends of her husband's to whom she owed certain civilities. She conveyed the impression rather adroitly that in a few weeks her beautiful home would swarm with such people as Trent had been in the habit of meeting.

He was shown to a delightful suite overlooking the ocean. Outside the sitting-room was an iron balcony. A sunken Italian garden filled the space between the house and the sea. It was a magnificent place, vacant only because Guggensohn and his wife had bought a residence in Mayfair and were also interested in entertaining the forgetful great at dinner.

The Grants dined at half-past seven. When Trent had been introduced to those guests for whom his hostess had apologized he found he had an hour in which to dress. A man laid out his clothes. Trent drew from his pocket a report he had received from Moreon the servants. Indoor and outdoor help were here described. More had the talent for getting a man to talk

Put Personality Into Tokens of Friendship

There's always just one more story about any of America's former Presidents. This time there is another about Andrew Johnson, Lincoln's tempestuous successor.

Johnson, while governor of Tennessee, once resumed his vocational implements. He had formed a strong friendship in the Tennessee legislature for W. W. Pepper of Springfield, a stanch Whig, and once a blacksmith. Despite their irreconcilable political creeds the personal relations of Johnson and Pepper were extremely cordial. Pepper became a judge in 1854, and after a visit to Johnson, then governor, set about fashioning a shovel, which he sent with a note explaining it was intended as a memento of a friendship proof against all political differences.

Johnson, to show his appreciation, took up his scissors and needle and made a handsome beaver cloth coat which he sent to Pepper. It was a splendid piece of workmanship, probably the last of that kind of work Johnson ever did, and exists to this day.

Gave Name to Comet

Encke's comet was discovered by Pons, at Marseilles, November 26, 1818. It was more fully investigated by J. F. Encke, for whom it was named.

"Funny thing to me that Hub Snuckles don't get married," remarked Mrs. Lagg.

"What in tunkett does he want with a wife?" returned Lafe Lagg of Booger Holler. "He's got a tame wildcat that is always on the p'int of eating him up and a pet crow that has had its tongue split and talks all the —yaw-w-wn! — time." — Kansas City Times.

It's rather odd that so many people are trying to get even.

Don't Make a Toy Out of Baby

—Babies Have Nerves—

By RUTH BRITTAIN

Much of the nervousness in older children can be traced to the overstimulation during infancy, caused by regarding baby as a sort of animated toy for the amusement of parents, relatives and friends. Baby may be played with, but not for more than a quarter of an hour to an hour daily. Beyond that, being handled, tickled, caused to laugh or even scream, will sometimes result in vomiting, and invariably causes irritability, crying or sleeplessness.

Fretfulness, crying and sleeplessness from this cause can easily be avoided by treating baby with more consideration, but when you just can't see what is making baby restless or upset, better give him a few drops of pure, harmless Castoria. It's amazing to see how quickly it calms baby's nerves and soothes him to sleep; yet it contains no drugs or opiates. It is purely vegetable—the recipe is on the wrapper. Leading physicians prescribe it for colic, cholera, diarrhea, constipation, gas on stomach and bowels, feverishness, loss of sleep and all other "upsets" of babyhood. Over 25 million bottles used a year shows its overwhelming popularity.

With each bottle of Castoria, you get a book on Motherhood, worth its weight in gold. Look for Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the package so you'll get genuine Castoria. There are many imitations.

WINDY CITY HIT OPENS AT CURRAN THEATRE JUNE 24

Fresh from what was the longest run ever accomplished by a revue in Chicago, "A Night in Spain" will be exposed to view at the Curran Theatre, San Francisco, Sunday night, June 24th.

No attraction that has appeared in San Francisco recently has caused as much advance comment as this, the latest of a long line of revues sailing under the Shubert banner. Chicago newspaper reviewers, usually prone to conservatism, voted it the best extravaganza within the ken of the present generation. Some stress was laid on the rather daring character of several divertissements with the added comment that these tobasconian incidents gave a piquant savor to the delectable Spanish omelette.

From a spectacular viewpoint, "A Night in Spain" is noteworthy. Over forty scenes are displayed. "Rose of Spain," "Baile de la Noche de Casamiento," "Columbus at the Court of Ferdinand and Isabella," "The Blue Bird Room," "Spanish Shawl" and "Nocturne" are among the outstanding pictorial incidents.

Phil Baker who returns to the cast after a brief vacation, Ted Healy and Aileen Stanley head the cast of over 150 persons. One of the prominent features in the presence of the 18 Gertrude Hoffmann Girls in their remarkable high air pastimes and dance creations. Others who will be seen are Helba Huara, Cortez and Peggy, Paul and Ferrel, Fodi Brown, Sid Silvers, Mabel Ash, Bob Stanley, Glen Dale, George Anderson, Barbara Vernon, Tito Coral, Bobby Pinkus, Sam Braun, Larry Fine, J. Colvil Dunn, Lillian Smith and the Andreini trio. A chorus of seventy fair to look upon young women complete the entourage.

Two French engineers have invented an aerial torpedo for transporting letters and packages at a speed of nearly 300 miles an hour.

Next Friday, June 29, the State Theatre will present Billie Dove in "An Affair of the Follies." Lloyd Hughes, Lewis Stone and a capable company support Miss Dove. And don't forget, Friday night is Novelty Night.

A blind peddler in Oklahoma tried to sell socks to a legless jeweler and was offered a pair of spectacles in trade.

SAVINGS BANKS ARE PARTIAL TO BONDS

About 24 cents of every dollar deposited in the state savings banks is invested by the banks in public, quasi-public or private corporate bonds, according to a statement issued by Will C. Wood, state superintendent of banks, in the June issue of the Department Bulletin.

"The 264 state savings banks and departments of California held bonds in the amount of $292,045,727 at the end of last fiscal year," said Wood.

"This investment covered about 24 per cent of total deposits, which were $1,225,765,676.

"We find that $227,412,606, or 77.87 per cent of the total bond investments are in public issues, which include United States, state, county, school and municipal bonds. Quasi-public issues constitute 511 per cent of the total and prjvate corporate bonds the remaining 16.18 per cent.

"The largest single investment in any one class of bonds is in U. S. bonds, which amounts to $86,867,431, or 29.74 per cent of the total. Municipals come next in amount and are the most popular class of all, with 175 banks participating. School bonds followed next in the total amount invested. State, county, school and municipal bonds together represented 42.13 per cent of the total.

"Foreign bonds representing twenty-one issues of governments or municipalities, and railroads, were held by thirty-one banks in a total amount of $2,432,600, or less than 1 per cent of the total."

STABLE BUSINESS TO EARN STABLE RETURN

The buying public, which has been dined for two years on the champagne of quickly realized profits in the stock market, must come down to the less exciting but more wholesome diet of beer and victuals, when normal business can only be expected to earn normal profits.

This is the interpretation placed upon the recent happenings on the exchange by the leading financial writers and investment houses, both on the Pacific Coast and in the East. These same authorities declare that the wild scramble to purchase at any price has been succeeded by an equally unreasonable reaction to sell at any price. The next few months should see the end of this condition when sound securities will return to their normal levels, although it undoubtedly will be preceded by spasmodic fluctuations of little significance in the general economic trend.

Perhaps the sanest contribution yet made to the public information is contained in an interview with Harold Mack of the reliable brokerage firm of McDonnell & Company, published in the San Francisco Call.

"Where business was booming a few months ago," Mack said, "it shows evidence of slowing down; where money was cheap and plentiful, it shows signs of tightening. The result is, that instead of being able to look forward for five years ahead to a continuation of the unprecedented prosperity, we must look forward to a period where stable business will earn only stable returns."

Referring to the Giannini stocks, Bank of Italy and Bancitaly Corporation, Mack said:

"Bank of Italy and Bancitaly Corporation are now about at prices where a legitimate return on the investment can be expected, and even though no extra or special dividends will be declared for some time, this does not mean that a buyer of these stocks will not be getting full value for his money.

"The book value of Bank of Italy stock is around $110 a share. At a price of $200 a share it leaves only $90 a share for its worth as a growing concern, for its organization, for its good will, and for its unique position in the banking community.

"Based on a price of $200 a share, it has a normal earning power in normal times of at least one and a half times its present dividend rate. It is, therefore, bound to accumulate a surplus that, after reasonable intervals, will allow for extras.

"Compared to almost any other banking institution in the United States, baused upon its ratio of capital to deposits, to expenses and to dividend rates, Bank of Italy stock is selling as cheaply as that of any of large banks. Its management is of the soundest.

"There is no bank in the entire country that is sounder today than this bank is, and this is not said because of any personal friendship to the institution, but is based upon a knowledge of their loans, their investments and their entire banking structure which, if we may say it, is more conservative in its makeup than almost any other institution in the country.

"Everyone who went with the bank from its inception, or who came in within recent years, had a handsome profit at this price or at $100 a share less.

"And now as regards Bancitaly Corporation. This stock owns among the best securities in the United States. Of late all securities have declined in value. Naturally the Bancitaly Corporation must reflect this decline. For the last few years it has made tremendous sums of money for its stockholders.

"For the immediate future it will not make anything as much, but again looking at it on its worst side, figuring only on a dividend return from its investments, and not looking for anything to be made from its private banking operations that are always valuable, it will still show earnings of several times its dividend rate."

Charles Sutro, in the Examiner, says:

"The Bancitaly Corporation is one of the ranking investment trusts in the world. Its assets are properly diversified and handled with intelligence and consist of the very safest of securities. As the country grows so must the institution grow.

"The Bank of Italy is one of the largest financial institutions on the coast and is destined to be one of the largest in the country. It is conservatively and ably managed.

"I strongly indorse the advice of A. P. Giannini given to his stockholders, who have their assets paid for: 'Sit tight.' "
